Stone Edge Technologies, Inc. has announced a unique partnership with Shipwire.com that will make it easier for small business merchants who use the Stone Edge Order Manager, Version Five, to streamline their operations. Sellers can use the Stone Edge business-management tool, which now offers a Point of Sale (POS) system, and use Shipwire.com to fulfill orders. The companies said this will reduce the time sellers spend managing inventory and fulfilling customer orders.

"Most merchants are strapped for time, and experience ups and downs when it comes to expanding their business and reducing costs," said Damon Schechter, CEO of Shipwire.com, and author of the best-seller Delivering the Goods. "Now that the Stone Edge Order Manager works seamlessly with Shipwire.com, a small business can easily and quickly add a new sales channel to their business, such as eBay auctions, and arrange to have inventory sent directly to Shipwire warehouses and on to customers."

In addition to automatically sending fulfillment orders to Shipwire.com, the new version of the Order Manager can import shipment tracking data for emails and customer lookups, and can automatically synchronize inventory information.

Pricing for Order Manager Version Five is currently available from www.stoneedge.com with prices beginning at $1,500 for the Standard Version, including five workstation licenses and extended support.
